

ARCHIVISTS ROUND TABLE of METROPOLITAN NEW YORK

ADVOCACY IN THE ARCHIVES PROFESSION

The February Round Table is devoted to the issue of advocacy and the broad possibilities that this has on our profession and on our own work whether it is in a private or public, profit or not-for-profit institution.

State Archivist Larry Hackman will tell us about the State Archives' pioneering programs to improve the condition of historical records repositories in our region and the lobbying efforts that led to the successful passage of this program. There will be discussion about how New York City archivists can get involved in advocacy and why they should.

In addition, Larry will be joined by speakers from the Wagner Labor Archives, the Center for Puerto-Rican Studies at Hunter College and the Juilliard School, all of whom have received financial support from New York State's Documentary Heritage Program. They will outline the work they undertook with DHP grant money -- money which could be available to you and your repository under the DHP bill for 1990.
